

TrenchFoot

To know TrenchFoot is to love it! I first discovered this product at the National Hardware Show in Las Vegas in 2005. The unusual shape and bright yellow color caught my eye, but I couldn't really tell what it did by simply looking at the product by itself. Thankfully Bill Burke, one of the TrenchFoot developers was standing by to help point out the true virtues of this unassuming resource.

TrenchFoot is designed to slide over the handle of just about any digging tool. Unfortunately, most tools of this type simply don't provide a safe and adequate place for your foot. Let's face it; the ball of your foot was not made to drive pressure into a thin edge of metal. Enter TrenchFoot! Slide this clever device over the handle. The smart design secures it snugly in place over the most leveraged part of the tool. Now an ample, non-slip footpad replaces a narrow, off center strip of metal for driving the blade into the earth.

The convenience, ease of use, affordable price, bright color and near bulletproof strength make TrenchFoot a joe gardener Certified BEST OF THE MUST-HAVES™ for 2006. TrenchFoot truly is a "smart resource for better (and safer) gardening."

*Joe Lamp'ol
January 2006*

Each year, The joe gardener Company spends countless hours scouring the country looking for The Coolest Garden Gear and Gadgets for the New Year to reveal at the largest national garden and flower shows. Those that are selected are awarded the distinction as THE BEST OF THE MUST-HAVES. These products aren't just "good enough". They're the best, most unique, highest quality gardening products we feel gardeners should own.